The Monetary Crisis.

It is now but twenty years since the great monetary crisis of 1837 visited our land; and the child of that period has scarcely reached his manhood before we have another visit from the direful and destructive monster. Ours is not the only country subject to these financial revulsions, but all the great trading nations of the of peace. earth are moso or less tiable to them, and have more than once been scourged severely for overtrading and wild speculation.

But no country is more liable to them than our own, for the temptation to that wild and adventurous spirit of enterprise is greater here than anywhere else on the globe. We all feel that with a little credit, a fair chance and good luck, the position of a millionsire awaite us. And no where else are fortunes so certain, and made so rapidly as in the United States.

Whether the banks are to be consured in whole or but in part for this periodical calamity to our country, or whether the blame should be laid entirely at the door of the trading population, or should be appertioned between the banks and their customers, we will not undertake at present to discuss. There is certainly a cause for it somewhere, however deep it may lie hid from the plain and ordinary understanding of the people. The banks seem to have will be materially increased in numbers. the parting hand—to say farewell—dear they deserve it or not.

The question of banks is a difficult and complex one, and, whether they are greater benefit to one portion of the community than to another, or a blessing to all or a curse to all, we will not stop to inquire .-They are certainly used by all civilized countries; and these nations that have the amelieration of the human family have recognized most the associations of capital in the form of banks. And it would seem that, from the general use of banks by the more enlightened nations, these institutions like ours, where energy and industry are never so richly rewarded, where there is to its development as enabling those of skill and enterpri e, but without money, to try their fortunes in the race for wealth.

Happily for the country, we were qualifications. in a condition of profound peace when these events transpired. Had we been in a state of wer with a foreign power, inconceivable distress and dishonor must have resulted. The funds kept as a sacred deposit for just such emergencies wettil not have been forthcoming. About five o'dlock Wednesday afternoon last, the most shocking tragedy which it late election in the State. has ever been our lot to record was perabsent and younger brother—the youngest petrated at the St. Lawrence Hotel, on the south side of Chestnut street. As far as we can learn the facts, it appears that Mr. Richard Carter, the president of the Anthracite Bank of Tamaqua, Schuylkill Packer over W. and H. county, arrived in the city, and took up his quarters at the above hotel, yesterday. A few days previous to this, a young man, who gave his name as Thomas Washington Smith, arrived here from the South, and put up at the Madison House. At the Strickland over Millward, above hour, yesterday afternoon, Carter and Smith were observed sitting upon a sofa, in the corner of the parler fronting on Chestnut street, There was nothing exciting in their manner, and the essual observer would have supposed that they considerable length of time, when Smith drew from his pocket a Colt's revolver .-Both parties arose from their seats, when Smith commenced firing upon Carter. At the third fire Carter fell fatally wounded, and Smith fired two more loads into the body of the wounded man while lying prostrate upon the floor, in a pool of blood and the coolsess of the murderer, who quietly walked off, and the terror which was depicted on every countenance in the room, was a scene most shocking.

The wounded man died in a few moments, and was conveyed to his room, in the upper part of the building. Officer Albright, of the Reserve Corps, who happened to be in the vicinity at the time, took Smith to the central police station, where he appeared perfectly cool and collected .- The Press,
